PREFACE

In 1873 my grandfather, Major August Hahr, recorded the first family tree of the Hahr family (as far as we know). My father, Mauritz Hahr, effectively contributed to the genealogical investigation which in 1893 was published in "Svenska Aettartal" (Swedish Lineage Tables). My second cousin, Theodor Hahr in Pernau, followed them in 1937 with his exemplary chronicle of the Baltic branch of the family. Through them I learned to cherish our family and its memories.

In grateful remembrance of these predecessors and of all those who have assisted me, I hereby pass on to the Hahr family this genealogical survey, with its data complete wherever this has been possible, and supported by official records. My ultimate goal has been to bridge over lands and seas which nowadays separate the branches of the family, and re-knit the mutual bonds which once united them. May this goal be achieved!

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Mrs. Georgia Jaycox of Detroit, Michigan, has the honor of the initiative, and Lennart Hahr^{P. 149} of Norwalk, Conn. of the translation and publishing of the present American edition of "Slaekten Hahr".

I would like to express, especially to the latter, my heart-felt gratitude. May the result of his devoted and unselfish, hard work knit the bond between our so widely separated branches of the family even stronger. If this purpose is achieved, the initiative and labor has not been in vain. The edition is brought up to date, December 1959.

ORIGIN, NAME OCCURRENCE AND TRADITION

The oldest definitely known ancestor of the Swedish family Hahr, with its branches in the Baltic countries, Germany, and the United States, is the farmer Thomas Haar in the village of Gehmkendorf, in Joerdenstorf parish, ten miles north-northeast of the town of Teterow in the eastern part of Mecklenburg, Germany, near the border to the part of Pomerania then under Swedish rule. Thomas Haar's year of birth is unknown. However, it is known that on November 27, 1656 he was married, and that he was buried in Joerdenstorf on August 2, 1676. The name of his wife was Maria Suhr, years of birth and death unknown¹.

This Thomas may have been the son in the first marriage of a Hans Haar, married for the second (?) time on December 2, 1652 in Joerdenstorf to Haddewicht (Hedwig) Mellien, and buried there on February 24, 1653. Thomas had nine children, four sons and five daughters. The oldest son, Hinrich, baptized on May 7, 1662, year of death unknown, was married on October 19, 1688 in Joerdenstorf to Margaretha Dose, formerly married to Hinrich Westphal who had died in 1687. Hinrich Haar was a man of high standing in his village and became "Kirchenjurat"² in the parish.

Hinrich's younger brother Juergen, baptized on March 11, 1665 and buried in Belitz on September 12, 1732, had been married since October 23, 1691 to Eva Westphal, daughter of his sister-in-law in her first marriage, and baptized in Joerdenstorf on July 2, 1672, dead after 1740. This Juergen, two years after his marriage, became the tenant of the feudal estate Klein Markow, in Schorrentin parish near the town of Neukahlen, and belonging, like Gehmkendorf, to the family von Levetzow³. At the time of his death, and ever since 1727, he was the tenant of the feudal estate Gr. Wuestenfelde in Belitz parish near Teterow, belonging to the family von der Kettenburg³.

How the farmer's son Juergen Haar could rise to be the tenant of a feudal estate is a question of particular interest, but must, at least for the time being, be left unanswered. The farmers in Mecklenburg, as is well known, were at this time serfs ("glebae adscripti", cf. Danish "stavnsbaandet"). If a farmer's son or daughter wished to change domicile or choose a profession in which freedom of movement would be required, they had to buy their freedom. Even more money was needed to take over a lease. The tenant usually had to pay for all living and dead inventory on the estate and, most of the times, in addition had to pay a substantial advance on the rent. all honor is due Juergen and his wife Eva that they did overcome these difficulties, an achievement which should be noted with gratitude by their descendants.

Juergen Haar's oldest son, who in Baptism received the name Hinrich, presumably after his maternal grandfather, was born on August 18, 1693, in Kl. Markow, and was baptized in Schorrentin on August 20. "On August 12, 1708, he started his apprenticeship with the merchant Christian Thurman in Rostock, where he remained until the month of June, 1715, when he moved to Sweden and was employed by Mr. Casper Habermann in Gothenburg. However, he left this mercantile establishment in the month of September, 1717, and arrived in Stockholm, where he obtained "condition" (employment) with Mr. Simon Fredrik Kuesel. Two years later he started with Mr. David Hildebrand, member of the Board of Trade¹.

After the death of the latter in 1720, Hinrich Hahr set up for himself and on April 30, 1723, married Anna Kristina Kuesel, born on November 4, 1704 in Stockholm, and the daughter of his former employer, the merchant Simon Fredrik Kuesel and Christina Margarethe Albrec(h)t, both of German origin, Kuesel from Luebeck. Hinrich Hahr died as a wholesale merchant and also "Kirchenvorsteher"² in the German parish in Stockholm on June 12, 1747. His widow survived him for thirtyone years and died on December 28, 1778 at Hollola in Finland, where she was living with her daughter Eva Hyllén, wife of the local minister.

From this Hinrich Hahr and his wife Anna Kristina, nee Kuesel, the Swedish family Hahr with its foreign branches has its nearest origin.

The family name Haar with its variations Hahr, Haer, Hare, Harre, Harn, as well as Hahren of Haaren (with or without "von") appears fairly often in northern Germany, especially in Lower Saxony, Hanover and Westphalia, and in Schleswig-Holstein. The spelling with aa, ah, ae, or are (ahre), are only various ways of denoting the long a - sound. Those who maintained the church records in Joerdenstorf, Schorrentin, and Belitz, consistently spelled with aa. Hinrich Hahr, however, at least after he became a resident of Stockholm, always spelled his name with ah, which spelling his descendants without exception have maintained.

In high German "Haar" means hair. In older low German the word "Har" signifies a tool for sharpening of scythes, "whetstone". In certain low German dialects it means linen (cf. Swedish "hoer"). Seen topographically, the German "Haar" is a term for ridges in the northern German heath land. Especially well-known is the long ridge "die Haar", which runs along the small rivers Moehne and Ruhr in Westphalia. The road along the top of the ridge is generally called "der Haarweg". Corresponding to this, the East Swedish "har" is used as a term for a shoal. "Haar" is also known as a place name, i.e. the village Haar near Neuhaus not far from the lower Elbe¹ river, and Haaren near Lippe, not far from Hamm. The fairly important town Haar in Bavaria should also be mentioned.

The following may be mentioned regarding the occurrence of the family name and its distribution in Germany. The central office for Lower Saxonian Genealogy in 1929 published "Familienkunde des Landes Kehdingen" by H. Borstelman, in which one chapter is devoted to bearers of the name Haar in its various spellings². Kehdingen is the stretch of land south of the lower parts of the river Elbe between Stade and the mouth of the stream Oste opposite the old fortress town Glueckstadt.

The first Haar (Haer) known there, was cultivating land in 1381 in Assel parish. Several people with this or a corresponding name appear later on in the parishes Buetzfleth, Drochtersen, Abbenfleth, Dornbusch and others. The bearers of the name usually are "Kaetner", "Pflugkaetner", or "Erbgesessener". A "Kaetner"³ closest corresponds to the English "crofter", but owns his own land. In order to earn his full living he must also take on outside work as day laborer or craftsman. An "Erbgesessener" is more like our "farmer", and owns sufficient land so that added employment is not needed for his livelihood.

A family Haar (Haer) at one time resided in Flensburg in Schleswig⁴. The well-known "Moller's Lineage Tables" there note that the family had come from Westphalia by way of Stade, which possibly could have a connection with the bearers of the name in Kehdingen. In Stade a Thomas Haer was mentioned as early as 1511. Ditmar Haer, born in Stade around 1560, died as "Ratsherr" in Flensburg in 1619 without leaving male descendants. His grandfather is said to have been a merchant in Dortmund. His daughter Metta was married in 1619 to Balhasar von Oesede and died in 1681.

In the German part of Southern Jutland the family name Haar occurs commonly in the Schwansen peninsula between the stream Schlei and the Eckenfoerde bay, especially in the parishes of Karby, Sieseby and Rieseby, the names of which suggest a Danish-speaking population⁵. The great grandfather of the informant lived in Tranbuell near Kappeln, not far from Schwansen. "I assume", he writes, "that the Mecklenburg Haars also originate from Schleswig-Holstein. This also applies to the watchmaker Karl Haar, whom I encountered in Stolp, Rear Pomerania. In Hamburg we had numerous close relatives with the name Haar, but of these no less than 21 lost their lives during the air raids (during World War II)".

Information has been received from Kiel, in Holstein, that a Lorentz Haar was mentioned in 1598 in "Bremer's Chronicle"². A Mrs. Springer, nee Haar, in 1947 accounted for six generations of Haars, originating from Brodersby parish, Schwansen¹. A Henning Haar from Kappeln became a resident of Kiel in 1862¹. The Kiel telephone directory in 1947 contained no less than about twenty people with the name Haar, the one from Flensburg only two.

The then Lieutenant of the Reserve of the 4th Lorrainian Infantry Regiment, Dr. Jur. Otto Hahr, in a letter dated Bitsch, April 13, 1909, has communicated the following facts: His father, born in Reichertswalde near Mohringen in East Prussia in 1858, was the administrator of the German Imperial palace in Strasbourg. His grandfather also was born in East Prussia. Neither had brothers. The writer himself had a younger brother by the name of Vilhelm, a law student. No others of the name of Hahr were known to them. Since the church records in question had been destroyed during the Napoleonic wars, they lacked knowledge of any generations before their grandfather. This Otto Hahr survived World War I and is mentioned in the Honor Roll (Ehrenrangliste) published in 1918 as Corps Quartermaster attached to an Army Corps Staff in Posen (Poznan). The spelling, common with that of the Swedish family, should be noted.

In this connection it should be mentioned that the muster roll of the Swedish regiment "The Queen's Life Guard at Foot", which was mainly recruited with Germans, from mustering at Elbing in West Prussia during 1657, 1658 and 1659, includes a "Capitein Ernst Haar". In 1658 the name was spelled Hahr.

The well-known Baltic genealogist Eric Seuberlich has reported that the name also occurs in the former Kingdom of Saxony. August Har, of Elbersdorf near Pirna, in May of 1647 was the author of a funeral ode to a certain von Kiesewetter, which was printed in Dresden. Conrad Hahr from Merseburg studied at the university there in 1684. Also in southern Germany the name occurs sporadically², as well as among Germans in Hungary-Siebenbuergen.³

A van Haar was the principal of a school in Hamm, Westphalia, toward the end of the 18th century. In the county of Emden, near the city of the same name, several persons by name ter Haar occur around the middle of the 19th century, probably of Dutch origin (cf. page 12)⁴.

The noble families von Ha(h)ren or Haaren, and von Har, should also be mentioned. A Caspar von Hahren, married to Anna von Langen at the end of the 16th century was the feudal lord (feoffor) of Lahr and Crollage not far from Luebeck¹. A von Hahren in the early part of the 18th century was the Swedish diplomatic representative in Regensburg. The same name may also be found in Lewenhaupt's "The warriors of Charles XII". A von Har may be found on a grave stone in the Riddarholm church in Stockholm. In a book regarding this church which was published in 1937 the following may be read: Tomb stone number 109. Along the bottom of the old stone a shield, the lower part of which is missing; in the shield a mark of the combined letters M. L. Above this is inscribed Hindrich von Har 1628².

Also in Courland a noble family by the name von Haaren is found. The name of this family may originally have been von Horne, and originates from the yillage Hoerne near Osnabrueck. In its escutcheon were two horns³. Akerstein mentions in his "Youthful Memoirs of a Warrior" that the "warrior" (Nils H. J. Akerstein) during a visit in Frankfurt am Main in 1814 became acquainted with a baron von Hahr, a student at Heidelberg university, born in Courland, and, as he worded it, "a much too nice lad"⁴.

The German colonization of the Baltic provinces also brought bearers of the name Haat there. As is well known, in later years (from the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th centuries) branches of the Swedish family Hahr have also resided there. One of their members, Theodor Hahr, b. 1858, d. 1942 in Pernau, Estonia, was the author of a chronicle on this part of the family. In connection with this he also tried to clarify the origin of the family, and in 1937 wrote to the well-known German-Baltic genealogist Adelheim, among other things the following:

"Since, as far as is now known, no Haar or Hahr occurs in Mecklenburg earlier than Juergen Haar, the thought is close at hand that he was not born there, but had moved there, possibly from the Baltic provinces. For example, a family is known there by name tor Haar, also written Haer, Hare, Haerr, and zur Haar, which lived in Reval during the 16th and 17th centuries. Testimony concerning the foregoing is given by the official Registry of Reval, numbers 6 (1409 - 1624), and 7 (1625 - 1710), as well as your own work, published in 1925, "The genealogy of old Reval families", and the Indices of the Schwartzhaeupter-Compagnie of Reval ---. It is now in the interest of research to determine if not a connection between this Reval family and Juergen Haar can be shown".

The Second World War and the disturbances and upsets which preceded or followed it, however, laid unsurmountable barriers in the way of proving this bold hypothesis of Theodor Hahr's. First during 1954 the question of Juergen Haar's origin was solved. There is no indication of any connection between the soil-bound farmers Haar in Gehmkendorf and the family tor or zur Haar in Reval

The latter family carried a commoners' coat-of-arms, the shield figure of which was an upright lion turned to the right. The same figure is found in the coats-of-arms of Heinrich von Plauen, Grand Master of the German Order of Knights, and of the Saxon town of Plauen. Probably some zur Haar had been one of this Grand Master's followers and had assumed this coat-of-arms¹. The last member of this family, Heinrich zur Haar, died in 1666.

Occasionally bearers of the name Haar are also found in Holland. Among them have been noted the poet and theologist Bernhard ter Haar (1806 - 1880) and during recent years a radio astronomer of the same name.

The Scandinavian countries remain. In Denmark the name occurs often. Here it should be noted that in Denmark "aa" denotes the close a-sound (as in all). In order to make this sound long an "h" is sometimes inserted, Haahr.

Mr. Helge Haar, a high school teacher in Ribe, in a letter from 1929 mentions the following concerning the Danish bearers of the name. According to a very loose tradition the family name derives from a small village Haar not far from Aarhus in Jutland. In eastern Denmark the name occurs more sparsely. However, it is borne by several families in eastern Jutland. The writer himself belonged to an old clerical family whose ancestor Peder Rasmussen Haar was the first Lutheran minister in Nyborg. Two noble families Haar, now extinct, had also existed². Finally the assumption was brought forth in the letter, that a Norwegian family of the same name was of Danish origin.

This assumption has been partly corroborated³. The many varied ways of spelling the name has however made research difficult. It has been written Hardt, Haar, Har, and lately Harr. That the a-sound is pronounced in Norway as in arbor, and not as in all, becomes obvious in the name form Hardt. When it became customary there to spell the close a-sound (as in all) with "aa" according to the Danish pattern, which was done until 1917, the consequence was that Haar also in Norway became pronounced with a close a-sound. It then became necessary to write Har, which subsequently was changed to Harr, a family name still occurring in northern Norway. The reason for the spelling "Harr" among others is supposed to have been to avoid the common nicknames "hare" and "harunge" (hare, and hare baby, resp.), well known also to us Swedish Hahrs. In older Norwegian "har" means high, tall.

The families Har existing in Norway are one clerical family and one noble family. The oldest ancestor of the former, Mikkel Nielsen Haar, first was a monk, but in 1576 is mentioned as the Lutheran minister of Barloese, Denmark. His descendant in the third generation was Niels Pedersen Haar, born in Odense 1668, dead 1712 in Norway as the minister of Torup, Bores. In the 17th century there was a clerical family Haar in Trondarnaes, northern Norway. From the Trondarnaes ministers the Ofoten family Har or Harr probably descends, the first member of which, Peder Raphaelsson Har, lived at Liland, Ofoten around 1675. A great-grandson of his, Ole Olsen Harr, born 1741, dead 1795, had seven children of which only one daughter reached maturity. She was married to a substantial farmer of the Aas family. One of their sons was named Ole Harr, and from him all by the name Harr in northern Norway descend.

The noble family Haar became extinct on the male side already during the 16th century. A female member of the family was married to the district judge Trond Benkestokk of Meloey and Jordanger, born 1495, dead 1558. Another one was married to Palle Lauritzen Friis of Loendegaard, beheaded for the murder of his wife in 1616.

A family Har may also be found in Sweden. The death records from Enaanger, Haelsingland, for 1772, report the following: "On October 2 died, and on the 13th was buried, the old master craftsman at Laangvinds Company, Nils Isacsson Har. He was born in 1725 in Sundsvall, and was the son of the master shipwright Isac Nilsson Har and his wife Lisa Johansdotter; at the age of 18 he came here to the parish and to Laangvinds Co., married June 24, 1750 to the widow Margareta Olofsdotter, who survives him, and who bore him four children, two sons and two daughters; the sons are dead. The deceased had a good knowledge of Christianity, but lived badly in drunkenness and disturbance of the peace; died of stroke going on 67 years of age". The smith Anders Haar, who died in Stockholm in 1880 may possibly have been related to this family.

To this may be added an item supplied by the formerly mentioned genealogist Seuberlich in 1937: "In Reval I recently saw in an old newspaper from the latter part of the 18th century (around 1770), that a certain Per Har sailed as a ship's master with goods between Sweden, Latvia and Finland". "Har", as has been mentioned before, in eastern Swedish dialects means "shoal", and may well have been assumed as a family name by coastal inhabitants.

Research so far has been unable to disclose any proven connection between the Haar (Hahr) family from Mecklenburg and other families here mentioned of the same or similar names.

An old family tradition should be mentioned in this connection. According to this tradition, two sons of Juergen Hahr should have gone into Russian service. The older son, Teodosius Joachim, born 1702, should have become a major general, and the younger one, Herman Hart(w)ig, born 1708, a doctor and "inspector of all hospitals in Russia.

The ancestor of the younger Hahr family branch in the Baltic countries, Theodor Hahr Sr. in Riga, grandfather of the above-mentioned Theodor Hahr in Pernau, in 1860 made a search of the Russian War Department archives concerning the major general. The result of this search was that the Russian War Department sent a copy¹ of a letter from the well-known adversary of Charles XII, Field Marshal Scheremetjev. In the letter he orders that "the foreigner", Peter Johannes Sohn Gelden Ha(h)r, who had been admitted into the Russian army on July 3, 1716 as a major, and who originally was to assume some vacant post as the local commandant of a town, should remain instead with his division for the purpose of filling a major's vacancy in some regiment when available. This obviously concerns a person other than Teodosius Joachim who was only fourteen years old at the time. The name Gelden Ha(h)r would most likely seem to indicate Dutch origin. The Dutch connections of Tzar Peter I are well known.

No Haar or Hahr occurs among all the higher officers and government officials who were included in the book "Neuveraendertes Russland oder Leben Catharina der Zweiten" (Riga and Leipzig 1772) with its appendix "Etat von Russland 1770". E. Amburger, Ph. D., the foremost expert at the present time on the genealogy of foreign families in the old Russia, in 1947 reported that he knew the names of practically all Russian generals during the 18th century, but that among them was no one by name Hahr (Haar). An inquiry with the Soviet Russian Legation in Stockholm for remittance to the proper archives has not been found worthy of a reply.

The tradition regarding the physician Herman Hartwig, however, seems to have been corroborated. Dr. W. Lenz at the town archives in Stade, also in 1947, found in "Geschichte der Medizin in Russland" (Moscow 1817), by W. M. von Richter, that a surgeon Ha(h)r, in Russian "Ghar", had been buried in Moscow on November 12, 1760, which year of death could apply to Herman Hartwig. He also occurs as a "doubtful debtor" in the estate of his brother Hinrich Hahr of 1748.

1. Berlin, Charlottenburg.
2. An Imperial Physician to the Tzar, Friedrich Haar, born 7/18 1813, year of death unknown, has been assumed to be a possible descendant of the above-mentioned Herman Hartwig. After a closer check it has been found, however, that the birthplace of the former was the church village Moetzingen in Wuerttemberg. No provable genealogical connection between these two therefore seems to exist. Friedrich Haar's great grandson, Arthur Douglas Hahr, born 4/4 1930 in Helsinki, has become a Swedish citizen, and is now a Lieutenant in the Royal Swedish Air Force.

FAMILY RECORD

NOTE: So-called career data have not been included in the record, which is primarily intended as a summary to serve as a foundation for the family history.

During the reading please observe that dates before 1753 and all Russian dates follow the Julian chronology and are behind our Gregorian chronology by eleven days during the 18th century and twelve days during the 19th century.

THE OLD FAMILY BIBLE

!. INTRODUCTION

The Bible - Charles XII:s Biblia, printed by Henrik Kayser in 1703 - on November 22, 1772 was bequeathed by Anders Rothstein, City councillor in Stockholm, to his daughter Catharina Magdalena, married to the supercargo and landowner Henric Wilhelm Hahr. see p. 18

According to a clause in the will of Henric Wilhelm Hahr and his wife, dated May 12, 1791, the Bible should belong after their death to their oldest son, Anders Hahr, with the provision that after his death it should go to the oldest of his children and male descendants "with the explicit provision that never during division of an estate will it be subject to lot or exchange or be inherited by descendants outside of our family.

Anders Hahr confirmed the above, and gave the Bible to his oldest son, Anders Christoffer, on July 13, 1824.

Since that day and until February 27, 1953, no further annotations have been made in the Bible.

After the time when Anders Christoffer had possession of the Bible, it was not owned by the family for about 100 years. Anders Christoffer probably took it with him when during the 1840's he moved from Nosaby in Scania to the Isle of Gotland. During those years in the 1860's which were economically troublesome for him and his sons on Gotland, or perhaps in connection with the hurried emigration of his oldest son Anders Goeran Fredrik Hahr from Stockholm via Gotland to the United States in the summer of 1854, the Bible presumably was sacrificed for hard cash. Surely this did not happen unless there was an extreme emergency.

Strangely enough, Anders Christoffer's niece Zuleima Hahr, who stayed with him and his son August Theodor together with her mother at the Ar lime works during the summer of 1862, in her letters to her fiance Lieutenant Henning Thulstrup does not mention a word about the family Bible. The life at Ar, and the relatives there, are however described in detail. This fact would indicate to a certain degree that the Bible already at this time had been sold.

A Rothstein during the 1890's offered to sell the Bible to Anders Hahr's grandson, Mauritz Hahr. The latter, however, due to the high asking price, had to forego the purchase. This Rothstein was probably Karl Otto Rothstein, station master at Hemse, b. 1862 in Visby, d. 1901 at Hemse. He was the son of Karl Gustaf Rothstein, cashier of the Gotland Enskilda Bank, b. 1830, d. 1870 in Visby. Whether or not the Bible came into the ownership of these Rothsteins through direct purchase or through an intermediary is

The City Councillor Anders Rothstein's great grandson, manager of the Liljeholmen candle factory, is said to have purchased the Bible around 1900 at an auction- whether this was a book auction, or a merchandise auction is unknown. His daughter, Bertha, married to E.O.A. Angelin, Secretary of the Army Department, inherited it from her father, and after her it went to her daughter Karin, married some time after 1910 to Count E. Spens, Captain of the Royal Swedish Navy. Upon being widowed, Countess Spens had the kindness to offer the Bible to the son of the above-mentioned Mauritz Hahr, Colonel Goesta Hahr.

After the necessary means had been contributed by the family, above all by the great granddaughter of Anders Hahr, Mrs. Annie Hahr-Dobbs of Atlanta, Ga., the Bible was returned to the ownership of the Hahr family on February 27, 1953 - exactly 250 years after its printing. May it so remain!

If the provisions of the will had been carried out, the present owner of the Bible would have been the great grandson of Anders Goeran Fredrik Hahr, William Edward Hahr, born 1927 in Brooklyn, N. Y., now residing in Nyack, N. Y.

THE OLDEST SWEDISH FAMILY GRAVES

When August Hahr wrote his study in the Genealogical Magazine in 1917, concerning the three miniature portraits¹ which have been preserved in the family from the 18th century, he finished it with the following conclusion: "The family members of that time, although in prominent and wealthy positions, according to present-day standards, like many others had done little to preserve their names for distant future descendants. In this way the connecting tradition was broken, and the memories obliterated. The past faded away more and more into oblivion. The older history of the family seemed to form a complete unit in itself.

We do not have to search long to find the reason. During the first half of the 19th century the family underwent a severe and destructive economical crisis, the effects of which can be traced into our days. Bankruptcy followed bankruptcy. The focal point - the old manor Graneberg in Gryt parish, Soedermanland - was sold at a sheriff's sale. Fastmyra in the same parish, Ryedal in Blekinge and Oellsjoe in Scania went the same way. Furniture and inherited goods were scattered, and went into the hands of strangers. Not even the old family Bible, in spite of the conditions connected with the legacy, could be saved from the deluge. Need and worries did not leave room for feelings of responsibility and bonds with the past.

In close relation with the foregoing, the maintenance of the graves of the deceased was also neglected. Only the massive monument of Isaac Hahr - the owner of Bosgaarden - in the Tvaaker churchyard in Halland brought to memory one of the sons of Hinrich Hahr.

Forgotten by the family, this, the oldest tomb of the churchyard has been well preserved by the parish. The inscription with the beautiful verse from a hymn by Wallin:

What say the peaceful stones?
What is the promise of the runes?
The blissful in God's abode,
They are not dead, they sleep!

can still, although with difficulty, be discerned.

The genealogical research of the last years has tried to regain what once was lost. As has already been mentioned, the family Bible has been restored to the family. The resting places are no longer unknown. Where tombstones are missing, records speak.

1. That of Anders by Gillberg. The one of Henric Wilhelm by Bern-des, and, according to the author, the one of his wife (?) by an unknown artist. (The latter would seem rather to picture Jacob Jr.'s wife, Anna Sophia Wallens. The portrait of a divorced wife would probably not have been kept as a family treasure).

Hinrich Hahr, our Swedish ancestor, since June 16, 1747, has his last resting place in the Maria Magdalena Church in Stockholm. The tomb, built of stone, inherited from his father-in-law Simon Fredrik Kuesel, is situated under the aisle, where the rows of pews end toward the sanctuary. His wife and our ancestral mother Anna Christina Kuesel does not rest at the side of her husband. She has a burial place far away from there, in the sanctuary of the venerable Hollola Medieval church in Finland, near her daughter and her sons-in-law, the pastors Krook and Hyllén.

His son Jacob, the wealthy recluse at Kristineberg, has his resting place in the Great Church in Stockholm. This tomb, which according to the grave document is still owned by the family, is situated near the East gable between the high altar and the low outside door south of it, now used as an emergency exit. The vault cover, which, until now, has had no inscription besides the grave number (No. 164), through care of the family now carried his name as well as birth and death years.

Hinrich's son, Gottfried, the first owner of the pharmacy Hjorten in Kungsholmen, Stockholm, and his wife, nee Zethelius, are buried in the churchyard of the Kungsholm Church, but it has been impossible to determine the exact place.

The oldest son, Henrik Wilhelm, the super-cargo and manufacturer, later owner of Graneberg and Pungsund manors, and the one from whom all now living members of the Hahr family have their origin, was buried in 1794 in the Gryt churchyard in Soedermanland. There he had selected for himself and his family a burial place of 45 square ells, near the eastern cemetery wall, opposite the vestry (in the northeast corner of the cemetery at that time).

Later his wife, Catharina Magdalena Rothstein in 1820, the sons Henrik Wilhelm Jr. in 1802, and Jacob Jr. in 1809, the wife of the latter, Anna Sophia Wallens in 1825, and her mother Maria Sophia Hahr-Wallens in 1814, were also laid to rest here.

In 1828, it was reported during a parish meeting that the Hahr grave was dilapidated and that especially the fence needed repairs, concerning which the descendants were informed by official notice. Of the then still living two sons of Henrik Wilhelm Sr., Anders was broken down by his misfortunes, and led a needy and ambulatory existence. Carl was in faraway Riga, but had achieved economical well-being there. Of the grandsons some were abroad (Adolf in Tripolis and August on his way there), and one in Scania (Anders Christoffer). The others of the family, who were closer at hand, as for instance the two sons of Jacob Jr., in their poverty could have done nothing, even had they wanted to, to restore the grave.

However, Carl Hahr in Riga, perhaps by pure chance, learned of the public notice. Loyally he interceded, and in 1831 bought the grave "in payment for which burial place, where his relatives are resting, he gave 50 Rd. b:co". To him, or the possessor of his rights, the burial place should "forever be available, with the right there to let friends or relatives receive a christian burial, and to ornament the same in a decent way, as he deems best, however, that such ornament is not detrimental to the church¹".

The purchase sum was used by the parish as a contribution towards buying a new chasuble. This, as well as an altar cloth donated by the widow Catharina Magdalena Hahr, have long given evidence to the Gryt parishioners of the Hahr family at Graneberg.

After the death of Carl Hahr in 1854, the family grave fell into oblivion and remained without a caring hand. None of the descendants came forward, offering to accept the responsibility for its maintenance. Finally in 1890 the parish sold the neglected grave. The Hahr family grave was obliterated both in the cemetery and in the consciousness of the family.

Thus the situation remained until the year 1951. The circumstances concerning the grave were made known to the family, and the latter decided to try to repair without delay what had been neglected. The burial place itself could not be re-acquired to be returned to its original condition. Instead it was decided to install a memorial tablet in the Gryt church, with permission of the parish. A fund raising drive was started in the family, to which members living in the U. S. A. and Germany also contributed considerably, and on October 14, 1951, the memorial tablet was unveiled.

This was done during a simple ceremony in connection with the Sunday Service, and in the presence of many family members and parishioners. On behalf of the family, among other things the following was said:

"It is with the feeling of wishing to repair what surely without intention has been neglected, that we family members today have gathered in the church of our ancestors. To this purpose we wish to donate to the Gryt parish through its church council, the tablet commemorating those buried in the Hahr family grave, which we now will unveil. We do this, at the same time as we wish to express our warm gratitude to the chairman of the church council, Rev. Karl Baeckgren, and to its members, for their understanding and kind support, without which we would never have carried out our intentions. Now please accept into your care our memorial tablet to which our whole family both here and abroad have unanimously contributed. We are certain that it will be well kept by you, as a memento and testimony for present and future Hahr generations. Perhaps we may also hope that it be of some value to your beloved church as adornment. With the words of the psalmist, to which the inscription of the memorial tablet refers,

And withered limbs which in the tomb,
In darkness and quiet are mingled,
High above the vicissitudes of corruption,
Are glorified around blessed souls,

we cause the drapery to fall".

The ceremony ended with the organ sounding the stately hymn "Swedish Prayer" which was composed by Fredrik Hahr - once a pupil in Liszt's master class. The tones of that hymn certainly are worthy of following every Hahr sent to his last rest.

An Exhortation!

May the Hahr family, for their own common gain, keep up, and further this, their own memorial fund! Make it into a family "Flower Fund", and remember it with a cash donation instead of floral and honorary gifts.

The Founder.

ANNA AND MARIA LAGERCRANTZ' RELIEF AND SCHOLARSHIP FUND (Summary)

The sisters Anna and Maria Lagercrantz, b. 2/1 1863 and 10/2 1865, respectively, were daughters of the Captain of the Royal Coast Artillery, Carl Elias Lagercrantz and Hulda Justina Augusta Hahr (see the family record, table 36). At the death of their father in 1880, when they were left in precarious economical circumstances, their uncle, Mauritz Hahr, managed to obtain work, both for his unsupported sister Mathilda (see the family record, table 36) and his two nieces. This work consisted in the binding of note books used by the State Railroads. The business was started in 1881 and continued until 1912, when the competition from mechanized binderies became too powerful, but in the meantime, through careful management, it had provided a livelihood, and retirement funds, for all three, living together in the same household.

Before their deaths - Anna on 3/29, 1941, and Maria on 9/5, 1946 - they had bequeathed the main part of their estate, in a will of 9/16, 1937, to a trust fund, called "Anna and Maria Lagercrantz' Relief and Scholarship Fund", with priority for stipends to descendants, widows, or widowers of descendants, of (1) district agricultural officer Robert Hahr, (2) the Managing Director of the State Railroads Mauritz Hahr, (3) Chief Forest Superintendent Theodor Hahr, and (4) Forest Superintendent Alfred Hahr. Before the trust can be used for such purposes, certain named persons are to enjoy annuities.

The Board of Trustees is composed of (1960): Goesta Hahr, Gunnar Hahr, Henrik Hahr, Bo Lagergren, and Miss Ella Ientzen.

The present recipients of annuities are six, and the total of the annuities at present is Sw. Crs. 4,000:- (about $ 775:-). The remaining income has been capitalized, but will probably be used in the near future.

The capital of the trust on February 26, 1947 was Sw. Crs. 121,858:- (about $ 23,500:-), and on January 1, 1956 was Sw. Crs. 163,423:- (about $ 31,600:-). Miss Elin Hahr has especially contributed to this increase in the capital, through a donation of Sw. Crs. 3,000:-.

The will states that if none of the persons qualified for priority should be alive, members of the noble family Lagercrantz shall have priority for assistance or scholarships.

The funds are to be deposited with AB Svenska Handelsbanken.

In the Swedish original, there follows a table showing certain persons qualified for priority under the trust agreement, and not mentioned in the Hahr family register. These persons are living in Sweden.

POSTSCRIPT

To the extent that time and strength permits, it is my intention to complete this suvey of the family with a history, mostly in the form of "biographical notes". These will be founded mainly on documents and excerpts from the "Hahr family archive", which is available to the family in the City of Stockholm Archives. For the completion of this history, however, further older letters and documents concerning family members would be of the utmost value. If such letters etc. are owned or known by readers, I would be very pleased for a message to the address: Floragatan 19, Stockholm Oe, Sweden.
